

Free Community Ambassador training

Are you interested in attending a free course, gaining knowledge, more self awareness and helping to spread the word of Cadas and the services we offer?

As part of the Carlisle Project, Cadas are offering a free four day communication skills course to train members of the public to become ambassadors for Cadas. The course aims to give participants more confidence and understanding in dealing with people with drug or alcohol problems in their own communities, or workplace. The course will focus on;

- Communication Skills
- Motivational Interviewing
- People and the cycle of change
- Understanding where communication skills are useful with addictive behaviour
- Hearing language
- Linguistic guides to recognising passivity

At the end of this training, as an ambassador you will be able to promote and facilitate access in your communities to Cadas. If your interested in benefitting from this unique free training then please get in touch to reserve your place!
